COST OF NATIONAL DEFENSE.

(Fort Worth Record.) John H. Hill of Indiana is the publisher of the Editorial. Mr. Hill insists that this nation should have an income tax and navy. He would provide these by cutting down governmental expenses just by reducing the membership of the house of representatives. He insists that reconstruction and remodeling from the ground alone will satisfy the intelligence of the land, and he presents a startling array of facts and figures taken from the New York World.

The National Security League shows that it has cost the United States $1,000,000,000 in ten years to maintain an army of 20,000, while for $25,000,000 Switzerland has had for ten years a citizen army of 200,000 always ready if needed. More startling still are the facts if we total our military bills for the army, navy and pensions. When the great race war began they were nearly $487,000,000 a year, not including some $10,000,000 paid by the states for military equipment. Over 100,000,000 were expended in 1914 and 1915 were expended...

THE DAY IN THE COTTON MARKET

Quotations From all Markets Furnished The Caller Daily by The Corpus Christi Cotton Exchange, Nuces Hotel Building.

The American markets opened about twelve points lower in a poor showing from Liverpool and the sinking of the Arabic White Star liner.

During the early session the market showed a tendency to strengthen but did not hold and slipped off again nearly to the opening level.

With the loading of the week and assistance the market got better and finally closed 1 to 2 points below the previous night's figures.

Spinnings takings showed $1,000,000 against $6,000,000 last year and $2,000,000 the year before, and was considered bullish by the trade.

Liverpool is due two points higher in the morning.

STAPLES STREET SCHOOL CHILDREN BUSY WITH SUMMER SCHOOL GARDENS

W. J. Royalty Principal of the School Tells of How the Kiddies Were Interested in the Work.

CHILDREN ARE INTERESTED

A departure from the long custom, the progressiveness and laudable good result of which is evidenced, has been taken at the Staples street school where the idea of "the school grounds for the children in vacation as well as school time" has been put in practice. The step was taken as an experiment but so interesting did it work that practice now is the rule of discipline.

Speaking of the success of the plan, Professor W. J. Royalty, principal of school yesterday said: "Not only in the rural districts but also in the towns and cities the school grounds are usually deserted when the school term closes, and the buildings, grounds and equipment stand idle during the entire summer vacation—ground and in most instances unused for a year or more. It is a waste of money and a loss of income but deterioration is caused even more than when in use."

"At the same time parents are able to see their children during the long vacation period. In the larger cities philanthropic societies have established playgrounds and in a few cases school boards have maintained vacation schools where half-day sessions are held, consisting of directed play or some kind of physical exercises."

Last February the first attempt was made toward school gardening in this city. The caller reported an attractive list of proposals for children's gardens, situated at home or at school. At three of the most ambitious gardens were planted and cultivated. It was a collector day for the names of the garden when the first visit had opened and the teacher was asked to wear the first blue violet that blossomed in the school garden.

"When school closed near the last of May the gardens were at their best and it seemed a pity to abandon them at that stage. So the teachers at Staples Street School offered to meet the children each week so that they might continue the cultivation and care of their crops. The principal obtained permission of the school board to remain in charge of the grounds during the entire vacation period. Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday were named as work-days and on each of these at six o'clock in the afternoon teachers and pupils met at the school grounds and engaged in working day. The children were given for the week a certain amount of work to do, and the teacher was to see that it was done."

Amusements

"The Earl of Pawtucket."

Lawrence D'Orsay, who plays the principal role in the five-reel film version of Augustus Thomas' famous Broadway success, "The Earl of Pawtucket" is one of the best known British comedians on the American stage. He has a long and varied career in the legitimate field and his brilliant essay in moving pictures should convince his really remarkable popularity as a dramatist of the silly, low type of Englishman. "The Earl of Pawtucket" in its screen form will be seen at the Amuse Theatre Sunday afternoon and night.

Mr. D'Orsay is unconsciously funny. Typically British, his very criticisms make him naturally an object of friendly interest and mild humor. In personal appearance he is about six feet two and a bit inclined to stoutness. He carries himself with soldierly erectness and an air. He hails from Northamptonshire, England. As a young man he studied law and intended making that his profession until the footlights beckoned to him.

His first engagement was at the Marglobe Theatre. Later he toured the provinces for five years. Then he appeared at the old Philharmonic Theatre as Lord Alton in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1901. In 1902 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1902. In 1903 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1903. In 1904 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1904. In 1905 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1905. In 1906 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1906. In 1907 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1907. In 1908 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1908. In 1909 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1909. In 1910 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1910. In 1911 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1911. In 1912 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1912. In 1913 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1913. In 1914 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1914. In 1915 he appeared at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in "The Education of a Young Man" in 1915.
